

Student Learn About Natural Gas Safety and Conservation

with Persida Montanez, Public Affairs, Dominion Energy

Over 15,000 North Carolina students will help Tinker Fred beat the Wicked Witch with their knowledge of natural gas safety and conservation.

"Hi!!!, my name is Tinker Fred"

Dominion Energy and The National Theater for Children have been going into NC schools since 2009 with shows like The Clue That Turned Blue and The Energy Trek, reaching over 200,000 students at no cost to educators.

"Hi...Wolfy, my name is Tinker Fred"

This time around, the show is called Once Upon a Flame, an energetic, interactive, live performance that puts a spin on classic fairy tale of characters for plenty of fun.

"Wicked Witch Scream"

Students will learn to recognize the signs of a gas leak, why you call 811 before you dig and the importance of saving energy...all they can share at home, implement now and carry on in the future.

"They understand what natural gas is now and they understand how it's applied in their lives and how natural gas is used within their homes and, and within their life"
