

Selma Spratley – Surry 50th Anniversary

Well, I started when I was 23. I definitely didn't think I would be in 40 years.

I'm Selma Spratley. My job title is Superintendent of HP Operations.

I started here in October 1982.

She has all the traits of a good leader. She's professional, she's passionate, and just a strong woman.

She's made a huge impact, and she's everywhere. She's not just, like her role as superintendent right now, she's not only that, but she's in training, she's in procedure, She's I mean, she is she gets into everything.

I want to say I'm the first black female to hold this role here, in which I am proud of that, because like I said, I worked my way up from cleaning the floors to where I am now.

Hopefully, I've instilled in some younger ladies coming up that hard work does pay off, leaving the RP department in a better place.
