Lisa Curll (00:01):

We're here at our Colonial Heights office with Workplace Sustainability, our veterans employee resource group, and a selection of volunteers from HandUp nonprofit, helping them to load furniture from our office that we no longer need to build out their new Veterans Resource Center nearby.

Jeremy Stout (00:18):

The Veterans Resource Group, part of our mission is to work with our allies in the community to reach out and create a positive impact with the community. One of those ways that we do that is we provide donations through the Dominion Energy Charitable Foundation in order to share funds or share resources so that vital organizations in our community like the HandUp Resource Center are able to accomplish their mission.

David Hawkes (00:46):

This donation from Dominion Energy is going to help HandUp Community Resource Center tremendously with helping housing our homeless veterans, fighting food disparities in the community, and also helping us to build our Veterans Service Center, which will allow veterans to come in and take a shower, wash clothes, and reap other benefits that we have within our community resourcing.

Imani Beckwith (01:09):

There's a tremendous value that a donation brings to this group and many others that'll help veterans find their way. Going to give them hot showers, hot meals, way to work on the resumes and get accustomed back to civilian life and just getting back to a normal set of ways.
